Quickly qualified information from the world of security

The security industry proved to be particularly crisis-proof in the past two years and generally continued to record growth. However, the trend toward digitization also intensified in this industry, and communication structures between market participants changed significantly. Face-to-face business became the exception, trade shows and events took place exceptionally, and the use of digital content increased disproportionately.

Information channels have also changed in the security industry. Company-relevant and product-specific messages are spreading via social media, digital channels of journalists and publishers such as newsletters, but also through the use of the classic website. At the same time, users are becoming increasingly mobile and often check news outside the office or home office.

Key topics that were already relevant in 2021 are also gaining in importance for 2022: digitization of the building, smart technologies, artificial intelligence and IT security reflect the high level of technology of Security solutions today.

Information for the security industry is prepared differently in journalistic terms today. On the Sec-Global channels, articles geared to the target group are published in the form of articles, videos, podcasts, image galleries/slideshows and short news items such as Twitter, LinkedIn, Instagram and Reddit.

Also available will be specials of Euro Security with four main topics. The publication frequency for this kind of media will be quarterly and published in various channels online.

Digital - Special editions 2022

- Alarm and security systems as an element in building technology
- International product innovations around AI, ID and building systems.
- Developments on the DACH market. THE FAIR 'MESSE ESSEN'
- Networked technology for buildings and cities

In addition, another twelve issues are published monthly in digital format (via Pdf). The concept for classic and digital publications was further adapted to the information needs of the security industry. Particularly noteworthy are the design options in the context of corporate publishing, content marketing and display advertising as effective communication strategies.

The video productions of euro-security.tv will take up more space this year. We will endeavor to publish a video contribution in the form of a report every week. If necessary, articles with the same content will also be published in parallel on www.eurosecglobal.de/www.euro-security.de (our website will be relaunched in June 2022) or in Euro Security media. In the SEC Global newsletter and other social media channels, the videos will also be partially or published.

By means of the newsletter, key topics can also be addressed to special user groups such as public administration-procurement agencies, different vertical markets such as logistics providers, hospital providers, transport service providers or SMEs. But we can also realize a purely technically oriented mailing to installation companies or facility managers.

By newsletters and web activities coupled with social media channels, we are able to keep our finger on the pulse and are always up-to-date with developments in the security industry, as well as in our society and politics.

We would be happy to work with you in 2022.

The TV channel for the security industry - reports and interviews:

Euro-Security.tv reports professionally from exhibitions, conferences and roadshows - nationally and internationally - in English, German and other languages. The classic application report is effectively translated by our TV team into a report on projects on site in industry, trade but also public institutions in sound and film. For a company portrait, we are also happy to visit the companies and report on-site about production facilities, sales teams or the new showroom. We offer company- and product-specific reports from exhibition stands at trade fairs or roadshow events, which can depict a product presentation, statements on the market situation or the presentation of new strategies by leading personalities. In interviews, project managers from the supplier side and security managers from the user side have their say. The videos produced by Euro-Security.tv have a high public profile and are also edited in sequences for important media channels.

The latest reports from the world of security and expressive images of security projects and product demos make security applications comprehensible. All contributions are edited by us and run for at least one year on YouTube and other social media channels. With a licence, we also offer you unlimited rights of use for the videos. In this way, the videos can be integrated into your company's own channels.

We give the security industry a unique platform for the presentation of products and solutions. Because today, moving pictures say more than a thousand words and can present demanding contexts more easily.
